William J. Casey, Esq.
 Director
 Central Intelligence Agency

Dear Bill:

I am enclosing the resume of a young man whom I have known since he was a very young child. He has recently obtained his degree in International Relations and has been looking for a position in that field.

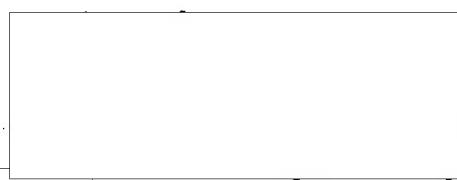

On Thursday, October 25, he attended a group briefing at the New York Federal Building regarding employment with the C.I.A. He had known, through conversation years ago, of my relationship with you and I suggested I would forward on his resume. He is very interested in this area and, as requested, has minimized the people who are aware of his participation in this application process. Other than his parents and myself, I believe there is only one other person who originally directed him to the agency who is aware of his interest.

I have always found John to be an intelligent, aggressive and patriotic young man. He has always been very involved and he is motivated in all the things he undertakes. I would think he would be a very good prospect for the government. If there is anything you can do, I would appreciate this very much.

I hope this letter finds you and your family all in good health and expect to see you continue on for several more years in your usual efficient manner.
